

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A DVD player receives output control information for controlling output of an audio signal to output lines, from an AV amplifier apparatus, and determines output channels for the audio signal based on the output control information. When decoding audio data recorded on a DVD and generating an audio signal, down mix processing is conducted as occasion demands, based on the output channels determined based on the output control information.